

Test result: Outstanding

“AUDIO FINESSE”

“[...] From a pricing perspective (€999 per unit), Magnat is making a declaration of war with its Signature 707 4-way floorstanding speaker. An elegant visual appearance that incorporates a beautiful base, exquisite suitability for hi-res audio files, woofer/midrange drivers with ceramic/aluminum diaphragms and a Hi-Res-certified tweeter module with two fmax domes are features that are atypical for the rather down-to-earth price point. Workmanship is of a premium class, the front panel that is screwed in place at six points and the chrome rings around the high-tech chassis are all extremely good.”

“[...] And “Basil” by Mark Knopfler. Again, an above-average resolution is required here. The Signature 707 gets immediately to the point, and the sound is once again homogeneous, finely detailed and compelling with its seamless transitions.”

“[...] “Get Lucky” by Daft Punk is a laid-back track with a solid bass line. No problem for the Signature 707. The bass is generated with the necessary punch even when the volume is cranked up and it always appears extremely precise. Listening is a real enjoyment and the speakers’ excellent resolution is also brought to the fore with this track. We then listen to “The Game Of Love”, also by Daft Punk, and are once again overwhelmed by the quality of the powerful bass range. The deliberately distorted electronic vocals are reproduced extremely accurately by both Signature 707 speakers. Small dynamic differences are also processed exquisitely here.

Conclusion:

“[...] For just under € 2,000 a pair, Magnat’s highly developed four-way floorstanding speaker, which features a double bass configuration and two bass reflex openings, generates an impressive performance thanks to a fine resolution, wonderful degree of spatiality, high pulse fidelity and an equally powerful and precise bass range. [...] The excellent workmanship and the classically beautiful visual appearance round everything off nicely.”

“For just under € 2,000 a pair, the buyer will be getting high-quality four-way speakers with an exquisite resolution.”

Read the full review at www.aredvd.de.