

POWERFUL SPEAKERS WITH A VINTAGE APPEARANCE

„[...] These speakers literally scream out for punk and rock music. One thing for certain here, though, is that I definitely don't want to smash my guitar against the carefully crafted MDF housing."

„[...] Even when used at a party in your garage or garden shed, these muscular units can really kick things off."

Playful candidates

Controlling Magnat's Transpuls 1000 with a 150 watt signal presents me with a bit of a challenge. But the RV4 amp from the same company offers exactly what I need. However, using the setup at these kinds of volumes could result in my glasses bouncing out of my cabinets - and probably out of my neighbors' cabinets as well. Nevertheless, I risk cranking up the volume of the amplifier towards its maximum setting for a few tracks - and I'm not left disappointed. During the intro to Allen Alien's "UFO", my entire sofa seems to bounce for joy. My heartbeat is in tune with the gripping bass line of the track. Impressed by the brute force delivered by the huge bass membrane, I turn to Yello and "Kiss The Cloud". Once again, I feel quite ecstatic about the extremely low levels that the Transpuls is able to reproduce in the audible and tangible frequency spectrum. The crisp bass drum is hard-hitting and I find myself not wanting to turn it down at all. Fortunately, all of my glasses are still intact."

„[...] While the volume and bass delivered by the Transpuls 1000 are fascinating, this speaker is also more than adept at handling delicate and quieter tracks. When used at a normal room volume, the sound unfolds with an impressive impact. The offset horn tweeters produce a pleasantly broad stereo sound stage."

Overall rating: Price Tip
Class: Mid range
Price/performance: excellent

Pros

- + Powerful reproduction
- + Punchy fundamental tone
- + Horn tweeter
- + Can be set up close to a wall

Cons

- No cons

Conclusion:

"The Transpuls 1000 from Magnat is a speaker with an understatement. And it won't leave a large hole in your wallet either. Its powerful design is not only impressive from the outside. Unleashing the 300 watts of music power delivers a sense of pure elation. All of the components are designed in a robust manner, which makes it perfect for generating an impressive sound at a medium-sized party. If you need things to be a little more inconspicuous, the brute force can be simply concealed behind a seemingly innocuous front panel. This allows the Transpuls 1000 to blend easily into more conservative living room setups. However, it really feels comfortable between electric guitars, drums and stage amps, where it can present its feisty appearance. If you like the huge bass driver but want to step it up a notch, the Transpuls 1500, which features a 38 centimeter bass chassis, is available as a larger option."

Read the full review at www.lite-magazin.de.